MOHAMMED HARIS
KALANDAN

Chairman and
Managing Director

Shipwaves

Haris has more than 25 years of experience in a leadership role at Mukka Sea foods, helping it grow to be the biggest fish meal company in India. As the Managing Director of Shipwaves, his vision and leadership helped in the rapid expansion of the young start-up across India and UAE. He has been awarded several Export Excellence Awards, including the prestigious President's Nirayathshree award.

In an Op-Ed piece earlier this year with Logistics News ME, Haris talked about the importance of using data analytics in the supply chain: "Data analytics play a critical role in improving a logistics company's inventory management. This specific realm of operations can be one of the more complex equations in terms of optimization because of the costs associated with inventory and the parameters at play."

"Shipwaves' services cover the supply chain from end-to-end. The mid- to the final-mile section of the supply chain is as important as the long haul sections of routes and are often the most complex to coordinate for logistics companies. Tightening up this area of the supply chain is crucial to staying on schedule, and the best way to accomplish this is by utilizing a TMS, which is simply a software platform for managing transportation data, like Shipwaves," Haris further added.

The company currently have aggressive growth plans to expand Shipwaves across GCC countries in the next financial year and to set up an innovation hub in the UAE to bring disruptive tech in the shipping industry.
